Domain grace periods and redemption fees, in practice

A grace period is a safety net, not a plan. Renew before the expiry date. If you miss it, you still have a short window — and then the cost jumps.

> QUICK ANSWER
> For domains ordered through Harer, reminders go out 30, 14 and 7 days before expiry and 0, 7 and 14 days after. After expiry the name is suspended; many extensions can still be renewed for 30 days, then some enter redemption with a restore fee (for .com, .net, .org and .info: US$90 or US$270, depending on the registrar). Renew before expiry.

The timeline for domains ordered through Harer

This summary follows the Harer store's Domain Name Registration Agreement. The same outline is on the domain renewal page. ICANN's Expired Registration Recovery Policy also requires registrars to send expiry notices and to describe post-expiry options for the generic names it covers.

1. Before expiry. Reminder emails go to the registrant email address in the domain record 30, 14 and 7 days before the expiry date.
2. On and after expiry. Further notices go out on the expiry date and 7 and 14 days after it. A domain that is not renewed by the expiry date is suspended, so the website and email on it stop working.
3. Renewal after expiry. For 30 days after the expiry date the domain can still be renewed. Some extensions have no post-expiry renewal period at all.
4. Redemption. After that, some extensions enter a Redemption Grace Period of 30–42 days, sometimes extended by 7–30 days. The domain can still be restored, but a restore (redemption) fee is added to the renewal price.
5. Deletion and release. A pending-delete period of up to 5 days follows, then the name is released and anyone can register it.

Restore fees currently published

From the same agreement, checked on 22 November 2026 and reviewed again on 23 November 2026:

Extensions	Restore (redemption) fee
.com, .net, .org, .info	US$90.00 or US$270.00, depending on the registrar the domain is registered through (LiquidNet Ltd: 90.00; eNom: 270.00)
.co, .me	US$270.00

Restore fees for .io, .ae, .shop, .online, .store, .xyz and .ai are not yet published here. Whether a .com, .net, .org or .info name is billed at US$90 or US$270 depends on which registrar that name is registered through. We have asked the platform for the missing figures and will add them when they are confirmed.

Habits that avoid this path

- Renew before the expiry date, or turn on auto-renew with a payment method that is still valid.
- Use a registrant email that is not hosted on the same domain, so reminders still arrive if the name lapses.
- Do not treat the 30-day window as extra time you planned to use. Some extensions have no such window, and a suspended name already takes the website and email offline.
- If you are moving the name to another provider, start the transfer while it is still active. An expired name is harder to move.

Harer Hosting is a reseller store powered by ResellersPanel. Harer is not a domain registrar. Normal renewal prices, which apply when you renew on time, are on the pricing page.
